

Belgian Artillerymen Bringing One of Their Guns Into Action on the Now Famous Sand Dunes South of Ostend. It Is Here That the Belgian Army Has Been Making a Gallant Stand in Defence of the Small Strip of Territory That Has Been Left to Them.

German and French Wounded Being Carried Together in the Same Rough and Ready Ambulance to a Base Hospital Near Soissons. When Once Wounded, Friend and Foe Are Meted Out the Same Treatment with No Favoritism.